GETTYSBURG, PA. WEDNESDAY, JULY 31, 1912

NO. 50

GETTYSBURG CHAUTAUQUA

BEGAN LAST SATURDAY—IN SESSION UNTIL AUG. 5.

Storm Interferes With Program on Monday Afternoon, Lutheran Summer Assembly in Session.

The second annual session of the Gettysburg Chautauqua Assembly began in all the bustle of Guard week on last Saturday evening. A regulation Chautauqua tent had been secured for the event and had on the Prep campus north west of the Stevens Hall and a neat enclosure surrounded it. Altogether the tent outfit and other accessories surpassed the provisions of last year.

The tent was comfortably filled at the opening session on Saturday evening. The "Dawn of Plenty" attraction had disappointed Dr. Scorer, failing to put in appearance, according to Dr. Scorer's belief because they had to make a too big and expensive leap from the last place of exhibition. Other entertainers had put in appearance and a change of schedule was arranged.

Mrs. Ada Turner Kurtz sang a number of songs. She has a rich voice, that pleased and delighted. Miss Jeanette Turner Broomell gave a number of recitations that charmed the audience. She has a wonderful gift of mimicry, a gift we have never seen excelled and her impersonations so portray the real thing that one almost forgets the performer. A performance of the Victrola, loaned by Frank Hartman of the Gettysburg Department Store completed the opening program.

At 9:30 Sunday morning the Union Sunday School services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Francis, of Sunbury. The music for the occasion was led by Mr. I. L. Taylor with a solo by Miss Ruth Clutz. The afternoon exercises were preceded by a musical prelude by Mrs. Ada Turner Kurtz. Then followed an address by Robert Downing, the Reformed Actor "Why I Became a Christian." The evening program began with the Union Christian Endeavor service led by Rev. J. B. Baker, followed by Song Service by the Chautauqua Choir led by I. L. Taylor. The Chautauqua has in this organization something to be proud of and always worth hearing. On the song service Dr. Downing spoke on subject "From the Stage to the Pulpit."

Storm Interrupts.

The fierce storm of rain and wind on Monday afternoon interrupted the program and almost resulted in a panic. The exercises had started with recital by Miss Broomell and solo by Mrs. J. B. Baker and Dr. Downing was the entertainer when the storm struck the tent. It pulled away from the stakes holding the ropes for about a third of the tent and the great canvas fell inward for that portion, carrying one or more of the poles. Wm. H. Garlach caught hold of the pole to prevent its fall upon the people and was carried down with it and falling on a chair was bruised about the body.

No other persons were injured but a panic seized the audience that for a moment seemed that it might become disastrous but cool heads soon prevented anything of the kind. At the moment of intensest excitement a number of people were pushed out of the tent by the crowd back of them and in the torrent of rain these were literally soaked.

After the storm had passed the tent was fixed and the evening program came off in it as though nothing had happened. Miss Broomell gave a number of recitations and Miss Reba Miller sang a solo. Dr. Frederick Poole gave his first lecture on "Old China—Pekin to the Great Wall." Dr. Poole took the place of Dr. J. Leonard Levey, of Pittsburg, who will appear on Thursday evening for period first assigned to the former.

The Chautauqua program has undergone some rearrangement. Dr. Poole on Tuesday afternoon giving his Chalk Talk on "Chinese Word Pictures" and in the evening his second lecture on "New China." The concert by the Chautauqua Choir has been arranged for Friday evening. Dr. Levey will take the place of Dr. Poole on Thursday and Friday evenings. The other attractions will be as previously announced, including William MacDonald, Jr., violinist; Rev. Walt Holcomb, lecturer; Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Mrs. Martha P. Falconer, Dr. W. A. Granville, Dr. T. C. Billheimer, Dr. Charles E. Cartwright, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dietrich, magicians and musicians, and the Lyric Quartette.

Lutheran Summer Assembly.

The sixth Lutheran Summer Assembly opened on Monday morning with registration and at 8:45 the first session was begun. Rev. U. A. Hankey, D. D., of New Kensington, Pa., conducting the devotional study, "The Sufferings of Christ and their design." Rev. C. P. Wiles, of Washington, D. C., followed with Biblical studies in Ephesians and Philippians "Upon The Calling of the Church." The Conference Hour was devoted to three topics, "Value of Herodotus and Mission Study" by H. B. Gerhardt, of Baltimore; "Young Peoples Society Work" by Rev. J. B. Baker, of this place; and "Paths to Success, Path 1 Ourselves" by Miss Sallie M. Protzman, of Baltimore. The morning was concluded by Rev. Prof. A. R. Wentz, of this place with an historical lecture on "The Origin of the Pennsylvania Germans." A highly devotional and inspirational program has been arranged for the balance of the Assembly. Rev. U. A. Hankey, D. D.; Rev. C. P. Wiles; Rev. J. B. Baker; Rev. Jacob A. Clutz, D. D.; Rev. Prof. F. P. Manhart, D. D.; Rev. P. A. Hellman, D. D.; Rev. Prof. A. R. Wentz; Miss Sallie M. Protzman; H. B. Gerhardt; Rev. B. F. Alteman; Rev. D. Hurt Smith; and others will take part in the Lutheran Summer Assembly sessions, which will be held every morning until Aug. 4th with a sunset devotional service at 7:00 p. m.

Next Year's Chautauqua.

The Chautauqua directors took a very important step at a meeting on Tuesday morning. They decided to contract with Dr. Paul Pearson, director of the Chautauqua Association of Pennsylvania, for a circuit Chautauqua for next year, to be ten days instead of the usual 7 day circuit program. Dr. Pearson is a professor in Swarthmore and at the head of what is considered to be the greatest Chautauqua bureau in the country. He manages a summer circuit covering more than 100 days and secures the very highest attractions, great bands, Grand Opera Companies, highest priced lecturers. This contract should secure for Gettysburg the largest Chautauqua yet held, should make the Lutheran Summer Assembly a permanent feature here and of both financial success.

CAMP EDWIN H. STUART

OF THE NATIONAL GUARD OF PENNSYLVANIA NEAR END.

A Successful Camp Yet One Asking Most Pertinent Questions of Gettysburg.

By this Wednesday evening Camp Edwin H. Stuart, a camp of magnificent distances will be largely a memory. The National Guard began to strike their tents, pack up and take train on Monday. Sunday night was the last night for the boys of the First Brigade, composed of the First, Second, Third and Fourteenth Regiments located on the Forney farm. Monday morning they began work of taking down tents, packing up and by end of the day the Brigade was on its homeward way. Yesterday the Second Brigade, on the Springs Hotel farm, composed of the Ninth, Twelfth and Thirteenth Regiments followed suit. Today the Fourth Brigade take their departure and the camp is at an end.

The camp has been a most successful one from a number of points of view, yet it asks most pertinent questions of Gettysburg. It was the first Division camp ever held here or else where in which the Brigades were so widely scattered. The First and Fourth Brigades being located from four to five miles apart. While this location had its advantages in the play of the war games, yet it entailed more work on the part of officers and men to cover more ground. Opinions on the subject of the widely scattered camps were various. A few were enthusiastic on the camps as located. Many were delighted with the sites of their camps. Several organizations did not like their positions by reason of the condition of the ground after the hard rains at the opening of camp. The site of the camp of the Ninth Regiment had to be changed. With the conditions eliminated resulting from these rains, every one would have been largely satisfied with their surroundings and camp, yet there was an atmosphere over and around the whole situation asking why a compact camp such as has been held for many years here could not be held. With the old location, starting the Guards in the face, the question asked again and again, was why can't we occupy these grounds?

The answer to this question, that it was desecration, was no explanation and all kinds of arguments, and many of them unanswerable were advanced against this position. Yet the fact remains that the United States is taking the position that any use of the grounds over which the battle was fought upon which to locate a camp of the National Guards would be an act of desecration. This idea Gettysburg wants to dissipate as speedily as it can be done. The idea probably was given impetus by the attitude of Governor Pennypacker, but as he is a man who gets and entertains unusual notions, they should not be entertained as any criterion.

When the idea of desecration is minutely examined it evaporates into the air and there is nothing in it. Years and years ago the same cry was put up against the trolley and it practically meant nothing but a scare sentiment that did injury to the development of that Company. The change made upon the battlefield to make it accessible to the public were placing new meanings on the field that did not exist at the time of the battle. After the National Guards have occupied the battlefield a dozen or more times with in the last twenty-five years, the suggestion that the field was being desecrated all those years and no one never knew it strikes the average mortal as very funny.

How could the living upon the land by the National Guards desecrate the ground? How could the teaching of the lessons of the great battle on the battlefield ground desecrate it? How could sowing the seeds of patriotism into the Guards by a study of the field desecrate it? When analyzed the sentiment can not be found, for as one officer put it, the farmer hauls out a whole lot of manure and spreads it on this land and adds tons and of awful smelling phosphate to raise produce to feed the human body. While the Guards come here to teach the art of warfare to its citizen soldiery and to implant in the soul of the same soldiery the lessons of the great conflict of 1863, and the sentiment of patriotism, so that at any future time they will respond to the call of their country as did the boys of 1863. In conclusion he asked whether there was any higher or better use to which the battlefield lands could be put than that presented by the use of the Guard.

To foster the idea of desecration can only have one result, to crowd the Guards off the battlefield onto isolated and separated spots and finally off the field altogether and in the end off of Gettysburg. It is time for the people of this place, to awaken to the drift of events and to stamp as false sentiment this idea of teaching patriotism on the battlefield as being a desecration. Millions have been spent here as memorials and to teach those who come after and Gettysburg should be year by year more available for such purposes.

War Show of Engineers.

At the conclusion of the inspections the game of war was shown in a number of ways and perhaps the most interesting work of the week was that of the engineers on last Thursday. Near Reynolds's Woods with only one, near and no screws, nails, or bolts, to show the simplicity of its equipment, and in a spot in front of a deep ravine 25 feet across, blocking an imaginary army hotly pursued, the engineers felled trees within a few minutes, strung them across the chasm and bashed them together with screws without the aid of a nail, spike, rope or bolt.

Staunchly built and wide enough for artillery and cavalry to pass, the structure was examined by Captain C. W. Ottwell, U. S. A., who pronounced it strong enough to allow an army to pass over in safety. Once erected and made an object lesson of by Captain Ottwell, who used it as an illustration for a lecture to the hundreds of officers, it was presumed that the enemy, already in pursuit of the column, was moving on the oridge. With this understood, the engineer company simply placed three charges of dynamite under it, attached fuses, ignited them and a moment later the bridge arose high into the air, split into small pieces and fell back into the chasm, a broken mass of wreckage.

It was a pretty exhibition, furnishing just the right amount of thrills necessary to keep the interest sustained. Following this the engineers gave another exhibition of war work, telling trees as an abatis and stringing the fallen branches and trunks with barb wires, making a charge by the enemy almost impossible without considerable delay and consequent loss of life.

To further show the importance of their work in war time, a series of trenches, earthworks and bomb proofs were dug and their relative values and uses explained. These trenches were dug to show the protection to sharpshooters from a direct or an enfilading fire. This is accomplished by having the trenches dug at connecting angles, allowing a change of front. Then trenches for the protection of troops lying prone, with the earth leveled up in front to a gradual incline, shedding rifle and artillery fire, were thrown up and explained. Trenches for soldiers kneeling and finally trenches for troops standing were dug and explained. As a conclusion to their fine exhibition of war play the engineers gave a demonstration of the destructive effects of several explosives. After the officers and the spectators had stepped back many yards the various mines were touched off, sending stones, dust and great clouds of earth skyward, falling in a verticle rain of deadly missiles for a radius of half a square.

The engineers gave another interesting demonstration in an exhibition of destroying a railroad. First laying tracks of regulation 70-pound rails and spiking them securely to the ties, they blew them virtually to pieces by rack-arock, a nitro-glycerine product. With a terrific explosion, the rails and ties were hurled high in the air and came down completely wrecked. Some of the pieces of broken iron fell in front of Division Headquarters, two squares distant.

A novel feature was also introduced of a regiment of full war strength of 1500 men upon parade and fully equipped for war. The regiment consisted of 1500 men, 40 mounted, with a squad of mounted scouts and orderlies. Each company had 105 men and three officers, with a supply wagon, 18 field wagons, a full train of ammunition wagons, ambulance and Medical Corps. The regiment was commanded by Colonel Stillwell, of the Thirteenth Regiment.

Battles Fought.

Several days last week and on Monday, battles were fought over the country between camp and Marsh Creek. On several days the Guards were divided into two armies the Red and the Blue and on Friday they were split into four armies. To make the conditions exactly as they should happen in real warfare, none of the commanding officers of the four armies knew what their problem was until they started out. Neither knew just what elements their adversaries had, whether they had cavalry detachments, artillery, signal corps or engineers. In other words, the "enemy" was a force of unknown numbers, and it was the duty of each army commander to find his enemy, develop his numbers, bring on an engagement and destroy him. This proved the most interesting maneuver since camp opened. Blank cartridges were used, artillery detachments accompanied each army, cavalry was used as scouts and to operate as a screen protecting the front, and realistic battles scenes, to the accompaniment of artillery and rifle fire were enacted.

Governor Tener Reviews.

The review of the National Guard by their Commander-in-chief, Governor John K. Tener, was along an entirely new plan. In Gettysburg and was greatly appreciated and enjoyed by our people. The condition of the ground in the fields of Wm. H. Johns made it impossible to hold the review either on Thursday afternoon or Friday afternoon. It took place at 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon and came as a surprise to the Guards after spending the morning on a war game, which included three hours of hiking over roads and fields. The Guards had returned to their camps and settled down to a supposed quiet afternoon when the order went forth for the review. Quick work was necessary for the distant organizations.

Governor Tener had gone to Harrisburg in the morning on business but returned by the automobile in time. Clad in a Prince Albert black coat, wearing a silk hat, with Major General C. Bow Dougherty on one side and adjutant general Thomas J. Stewart on the other, and with staff officers, an imposing array was presented as the reviewing party stood in the Square, facing Southward.

The square had been roped and the four corners were crowded with our people and every window, porch and available point was packed with people to witness the review. The Guards marching to town had been posted on every street in such a way that the line moved up York street, passed the reviewing party and down Chambersburg and by different routes to the respective camps. The review in town was quite a novel feature never having been held in the town before. The 1100 marched their best in passing through the Square lined with the finest and the ten regimental bands, the finest musical organizations in the State gave our people a rich treat and that the crowd was not larger was due to the uncertainty of the event and time and place where it was to take place.

The division of troops was led by General Dougherty until the reviewing point was reached, when he turned aside with his staff and took up a position to the left of the commander-in-chief.

The Fourth Brigade had the right of line following the engineers. Colonel Charles O'Neill was in command of the Brigade substituting for General Coryell. The Third Brigade, commanded by General Clement, followed by the First Brigade, of Philadelphia, under General Price was next in line. The signal corps, the artillery and the cavalry followed the infantry.

A feature of the review was the presentation to General Lewis Good, of Philadelphia, of the Riley medal for long service in the Guard. As the band or the leading regiment was heard in the distance, Governor Tener signaled to General Good to come forward and pinned the medal on his coat. General Good has served 40 year and 8 month continuously.

Sunday at Camp.

Sunday proved the first rest day for the Guards since the camp opened, for the drill proved light work in comparison with inspections, hiking miles, playing the war game, maneuvers, being reviewed, etc.

There were services at all regimental headquarters but the one attracting the most attention was the military mass celebrated in the camp of the Third Brigade, by Rev. Father T. F. X. Dougherty, rector of the Catholic church of this place. Singers from a distance took part in the services.

James B. McCalley, the Harrisburg aviator made a short fly in the Warner field on Washington street, and a break to the machine prevented a more extended flight. Frank L. Wolfe, representing the Pennsylvania Aviation Company, composed of Harrisburg men arrived in town on Wednesday and at once took steps to secure a field in which to make the exhibition and the Warner field was decided upon as the one most available. Mr. McCalley is a member of the 8th Regiment and was quite anxious to make a demonstration as a complement to the National Guard, proposing to fly over each brigade to show to what advantage an aeroplane could be used in time of war. Expenses were to be met by a charge to the field.

On the field there several hundred people and all around the sides a large number.

The aviator had shipped here from the Curtiss factory a Hammondsport, New York, a Curtiss biplane. After the various parts of the machine had been tested it was pushed to the northern part of the Warner field and pointed southward toward the direction of the slight wind then blowing. About 3 o'clock the first attempt to fly was made. The biplane took a spin up the gentle slope and at the crown of the hill left the ground and went into the air soaring to the height of 200 feet according to the estimate of Mr. McCalley. After it had gone but a short distance the noise of the motor ceased and the aeroplane was seen to descend on a long glide, coming to the ground not far from the commissary building at the railroad. The length of the flight being several thousand feet.

Mr. McCalley, the aviator stated that the engine ceased to work at the height of 200 feet and that in bringing the machine to the ground he saw it was necessary to avoid a fence ahead and consequently hit the ground harder than otherwise he would have needed. The result was a broken rod on one of the planes, some bent rods and a twisted wheel. The flight while quickly over gave evidence to the many who had never seen an aeroplane before that the machines really do fly through the air.

Birthday Celebrations.

The coincidence of the birthday of Governor Tener on last Thursday, Aug. 25 and of Mrs. Tener on Monday, Aug. 26th became known and were celebrated. They received many congratulations. Thursday evening, Governor Tener was tendered a surprise birthday party at headquarters, the principal decoration being an enormous cake with 49 lighted candles. Impromptu addresses on the occasion were made by Major General Dougherty, Adjutant General Stewart and others. On Sunday the celebration of Mrs. Tener's birthday took place, as late in the day Governor and Mrs. Tener said goodbye to Camp Stuart and returned to Harrisburg.

Camp Notes.

Camp Stuart has been distinguished by an entire absence of illness. Of the more than 7100 men in camp only 7 men were in the hospital from different causes, which meant that only one man in 1000 was incapacitated. There was some uneasiness at first from the continued wet conditions of the camp of the Ninth, but the removal of camp ended this and no serious results were anticipated. On Wednesday Gerald Howe of

60TH ANNIVERSARY PLANS

GIVEN A HOPEFUL OUTLOOK BY CONGRESSIONAL ACTION.

$150,000 Has Been Incorporated in the General Efficiency Bill Shortly to be Passed.

Information was received last week from Congressman D. F. Lafean, that the Sub-Committee having in charge the framing of the General Efficiency Bill reported the bill making an appropriation of $150,000 incident to the holding of the 50th Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg. This practically means that this appropriation will become a law as soon as the General Efficiency Bill is passed.

This action means the saving of the celebration from the failure the Pennsylvania Commission has by inaction been pushing it toward it will become a success only as the War Department takes control from the Pennsylvania Commission into its own hands. The only practical work so far done has been the work of the War Department, and that a man equal to the situation will be given charge of all activities is a foregone conclusion.

As soon as the appropriation is available work must begin. The farmers must be seen and arrangements made with him about land. Already plowing has begun and in a short time every farmer will be at work plowing land for the fall seeding. The chances are that every wheat field will be standing when the celebration days of July 1, 2, 3 and 4 are here and it will mean big loss and damage to our farmers and community to have their grain fields in any way ruined. Some one should be here as quick as he can come inspecting every field that may be needed not only for a 60,000 crowd, but for two or three times that number and arrangements should be made as to condition the land is wanted to be in, and satisfactory rentals agreed upon. If this work is done at an early hour it will help situation here. Our farmers have always been found helpful and reasonable if they are given respectful attention, but a high handed and arbitrary course would complicate matters.

If the Pennsylvania Commission had the slightest appreciation of their duties they would attend to this detail, they have the money and are able this minute to send some one here but that is expecting too much of a Commission who are determined to distinguish themselves by a do-nothing program.

But Congress will save the day, and then it is to be hoped credit will go to whom credit will belong.

Troop G, Philadelphia, was kicked on the chest by his horse, the hoof landing above the heart staying in several ribs. Internal injuries were feared and he was removed to the hospital at Lancaster.

The detail of six members of the State Constabulary were in town during the whole of last week. They have a handsome uniform and presented a striking appearance and were helpful in preventing unpleasant features in town attending the camp.

Interesting experiments were made during the week by the Signal Corps, putting up temporary telephone connection between cavalry outposts and imaginary artillery force and moving from place to place as the forces were supposed to move.

Altogether Camp Stuart has been a success, instructive and help to the citizen soldiery of the State and profitable to Gettysburg.

Sunday Crowd.

Gettysburg had a big crowd on Sunday, including the Guard there must have been at least 20,000 people in and around the place. The trains began to arrive early in the morning and kept coming until after the noon hour and the out-going trains began soon afterwards. The Reading railroad reports that they carried 5253 passengers and the Western Maryland 4012 a total of 9270 Guards and those who came by automobiles and conveyances of all kinds the total could not have been far short of 20,000 and it filled the town and ran out over the camps. Conveyances of all kinds were busy hauling the people to and from camp. For the first time during the camp the dust became fearful, the streets had a continuance appearance of being long dusty lanes. Many of the visitors had lunch boxes under their arms. Many had friends and relatives in the camps and it was said that in some of the camps there were more visitors than Guards. The hotels and restaurants had all that they could do in the way of feeding the crowd.

It is such a crowd as this that gives the proof that the Anniversary Commission are up against a problem that their do-nothing policy makes serious. Living in the cities it is easy for them to see how great cities swallow up crowds but a town of 4,000 people is another proposition. It is not likely that half the crowd here on Sunday were in the town at any one time, say 10,000, yet the pavements were crowded with a continuous throng, the streets were filled with vehicles, often two or three abreast. Put into this town five or ten times the number and the congestion would be a crush that would be a menace to life. The celebration needs a tent city on every available side. The land is available and it is possible to make all necessary preparation if the Commission who have the money simply get busy and that at once.

THE WORLD IN BALTIMORE

AN EXPOSITION OF MISSIONARY LIFE IN MANY COUNTRIES

Illustrations Below Give Two Interesting Glances of What the Exposition Promises.

The World is to be reproduced in miniature next October, in Baltimore and 12,000 Baltimoreans are preparing to inaugurate the people of all nations in "The World in Baltimore" Exposition, which is to be held in Baltimore from October 25th to November 30th, 1912.

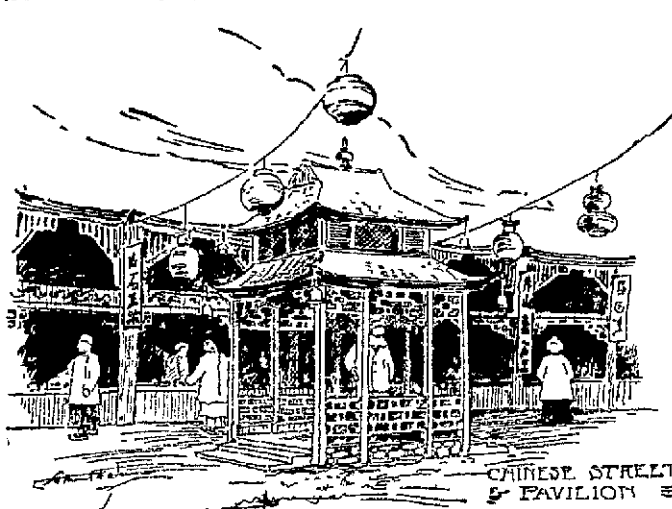

To house the Exposition, a large temporary building is being erected at Maryland Avenue and Oliver Street, adjoining the well-known Lyric Theatre. The new building will be two stories in height and will have a floor space of more than 35,000 square feet. It will be connected with the Lyric, in which the great Pageant of Darkness and Light will be given.

The purpose of "The World in Baltimore" is to show the progress of Christian Civilization in every part of the the natives of each country, and most of them will wear characteristic costumes. They will have prepared themselves by careful study to answer questions of visitors and explain everything which a person may see at the Exposition.

The great musical feature of "The World in Baltimore" will be the Pageant of Darkness and Light, in which several hundred persons will participate. This is a musical drama of great events in the history of missions. There will be five brilliant episodes, full of life, action, and color, taken from the four corners of the earth. The Pageant will be presented on the stage of the Lyric Theatre afternoons and evenings during the Exposition.

The total expenses of "The World in Baltimore" Exposition are estimated at $100,000. A group of business men in Baltimore are subscribers to a guarantee fund amounting to nearly $50,000. It is not the purpose of the Exposition to take any profit, but to spread accurate knowledge of the great work of Christianizing the world. It is the expectation, however, to take all expenses and repay any amount which the guarantors advance. Should there be any profit, it will be turned over to the Missionary Exposition Company for the furtherance of Missionary Education.

world. In order to do this in the most effective way, life-like scenes of foreign lands and sections of America in which the work of missionaries is carried on will be set up in the Exposition. Each section will be surrounded by beautifully painted scenery, reproducing parts of foreign lands and of our own country. Inside of these scenes there will be erected buildings which will be duplications of the structures which a visitor to a foreign city might look upon. In all, there will be between thirty and forty of these sections.

Old Swimm' Hole Accident.

The season is near at hand when a low whistle and a mysterious raising of the first two fingers of the right hand will cause any small boy to glide stealthily around the corner and set forth in company with his bare-footed tempter for the nearest swimming hole.

"Oh the old swimmin'-hole! In the long, hazy days When the hum-drum of school made so many run-aways, How pleasant was the journey down the old dusty lane Where the tracks of our bare feet were all planted so plain You could tell by the dents of the heel and the sole They was lots of fun on hands in the old swimmin'-hole."

The fashionable watering places may be well enough for the socially elite but the rivers and creeks must serve for the majority and the observant traveler can testify that the old swimming holes have not been deserted.

Of course every boy and girl should learn to swim and most of them do but sometimes the less skillful fall victims to their inexperience. Drowning accidents are all too common at this season of the year and there is scarcely a community in the State that does not have one or more on record during the summer season. Last year there were nearly 500 fatal accidents of this character throughout the State.

In the majority of the cases, these occur in localities where it is difficult to obtain the prompt aid of a physician and every minute of vital importance when a drowned man is to be resuscitated. Hence every body should be familiar with the methods of reviving the drowned. They are comparatively simple and can be readily learned.

Dr. Dixon, Commissioner of Health, has issued a bulletin setting forth clearly and concisely the methods of recovery and resuscitation in cases of drowning. It is profusely illustrated with excellent photographs. Everyone who loves to swim should obtain a copy of this valuable little pamphlet and add to his store of practical knowledge, the methods of reviving the drowned. It should find its way to every boat club, fishing and hunting camp, in the State. A postal card addressed to the Commissioner of Health, Harrisburg, will bring a copy free of cost to anyone in Pennsylvania.

St. Swithin's Day.

The many days of rain since St. Swithin's Day about two weeks ago has recalled to many the old legend. The story that it will rain for 40 days if a single drop falls on St. Swithin's day has been handed down from generation to generation for centuries, and so firmly is the legend embedded in the life of English-speaking people that it has been dignified by being classed with Anglo-Saxon folk-lore. Doubtless there are as many who confidently expect 40 days of weepy skies after a rain on St. Swithin's as there are those who entertain no doubts as to six weeks of bad winter weather following the terror experienced by the ground hog at sight of its shadow on the day he wakes from his winter nap.

St. Swithin was an Englishman, so the myth affirms, who lived in the ninth century, A. D. In 852 he was made Bishop of Winchester, which, after Canterbury, is the most ancient see in England. During the reigns of King Egbert and King Ethelwolf Bishop Swithin held the chancellorship, but despite his high office and with extraordinary modesty he made a request that when he died he be buried with the rank and file, rather than in the chancel of his church, which he considered too holy for his bones to rest in.

Well, at last the bishop passed away, his wish was followed and he was buried in Winchester churchyard. But later on the body was disinterred (1071) and buried in the chancel. At this disregard of the good man's request nature got her back up and a storm came on that showed no signs of abating until 40 days had passed.

How to Save Our Chestnut Trees.

The numerous reports received by the Chestnut Tree Blight Commission from all parts of Pennsylvania confirm the earlier statements regarding its spread and virulence and the heavy losses sustained by timber owners. It is unfortunate that but few people recognize the blight in time to save the affected trees, as the trees show little outward sign of their true condition until irreparably injured. The chestnut bark disease is a stubborn fact, and the thousands of diseased or dead trees present a silent but certain evidence of its terribly destructive character. Thus far no positive remedial agency has been found, and those in charge of research work practically acknowledge that when once a tree is infected, it is impossible to save the tree permanently.

It is also well for the people to realize the disagreeable truth that the chestnut blight is so widely prevalent east of the Susquehanna River that it is impossible to control it as readily or as successfully as in the western parts of the State where the infection is not general but appears sporadically. It is in such localities that prompt action and careful attention to chestnut trunks meet with the greatest success towards controlling this scourge. The Commission urges that infected trees should be destroyed without any delay, and that all diseased bark must necessarily be burnt to prevent the further dissemination of the disease bearing spores and pustules. If owners of chestnut have reasons to suspect the prevalence of the blight, they should notify the local representative of the Commission without delay. If this cannot be done, the fact should be made known at the general office in Philadelphia.

Loss of Appetite.

Loss of vitality, vigor or tone, and is often a precursor of prostrating sickness.

This is why it is serious, and most serious to people that must keep up and doing or get behindhand.

The best thing you can do for loss of appetite is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills—they will make you ready to eat, give a relish to your food, and assist in its digestion, and their effects will be permanent.

This statement is confirmed by the largest volume of voluntary testimony in the world. Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills cure indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles, and builds up the whole system.

Gen. Sickles for Commander.

Prominent G. A. R. men throughout the country are urging the name of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles for Commander-in-Chief of their organization. This rugged old veteran who lost a leg in the battle of Gettysburg is now nearly 91 years of age, and is the last of the Corps commanders of the Army of the Potomac. His selection might not be inappropriate in connection with the plan to have the 1913 National Encampment of the G. A. R. at Gettysburg.

Howard GERRER was given a hearing before Squire Hill in Gettysburg last week, on a charge of surety of the peace, and was held for August Court. He gave $200 bail for his appearance. John Raymond was the prosecutor.

AVOID THE UNRIPE BANANA

Not a Proper Article of Food While It Is of the Familiar Yellow Green Color.

Inasmuch as bananas are commonly eaten uncooked, it is obvious that more or less raw starch will be ingested if the fruit is not ripe, i. e., the skin has not begun to shrivel and darken. Raw starch may be singularly irritating to the alimentary tract of man and is at best poorly utilized, whether it be ingested in the form of uncooked potatoes, chestnuts, bananas or other native starchy foods. No one would advise the use of uncooked potatoes; yet many people eschew a thoroughly ripe banana in the belief that this wholesome fruit is "rotten" when the skin becomes darkened, whereas they eagerly eat the yellow-green starch-bearing fruit at a stage of incomplete ripeness. "Green" bananas, like "green" apples, are unwholesome so long as the starch has not been adequately converted into sugars in the ripening processes. But the delicious and innocuous ripe banana should not be made to suffer in its dietetic reputation because of the ignorance of the consumer. Here is a chance for popular education, says the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Experience shows that the thoroughly ripe banana (or the less ripe fruit, after cooking) is underserving of the unfavorable reputation which it has won in certain quarters. It forms a useful addition to the dietary, richer in nutrients and far more delicious than some of its more expensive competitors.

KILLED BY BLANK CARTRIDGE

Peculiar Fatality That Accompanied Military Maneuvers Undertaken by French Troops.

A strange and sad accident occurred in the course of drill maneuvers at Montreuil-sous-Bois, in the suburbs of Paris, France, where a soldier was killed by a blank cartridge discharged at him by a fellow-soldier. A company of the Thirty-first regiment was taken out to Montreuil for maneuvers. At three o'clock in the afternoon the lieutenant in command decided to order a sham attack on a fort, which his soldiers were to storm. Some of the soldiers were posted as sentries, and the others were told that in storming the imaginary fort they were to try specially to take the sentries prisoners, but a formal order was given to the soldiers that they were not to load their rifles. In spite of this a shot was suddenly heard, and a soldier fell with a groan. He was a young recruit called Laurent, and near him stood another soldier who had acted as sentry and was completely dumfounded by what had happened. Either he did not know that there was a cartridge in the weapon or he fired thinking that it was only part of the sham fighting. Laurent was taken to the hospital at Begin, and soon afterwards expired. He had been killed by the packing of the blank cartridge, which, being fired within only a yard or two of him, acted like a bullet. The unfortunate soldier was the eldest son of a widow, who has three smaller children to bring up.

Queer Uniforms.

From a story related by an Ohio business man it appears that in certain ways China is becoming Americanized.

This gentleman, who recently made a tour of China, was in Canton when that city passed under the control of the revolutionary forces. Observing several companies of those troops as they marched past his hotel, the traveler noticed that they wore an unusual uniform. Curious to inspect it at closer range, he advanced to the curb, only to discover that the uniform consisted simply of a union suit of American underwear. He was informed afterward that the soldiers were delighted with the outfit.

Such a uniform for troops in active service may be unconventional and all that and yet have distinct advantages. In action, or on the march, it might be found superior to more formal dress.

His One Item of Waste.

Senator Dixon, of Montana, says that he saved a soldier a walk to Fort Myer the other night, and, incidentally, learned a new lesson in economy. "Very evidently the soldier had been celebrating pay day, for he was good-naturedly intoxicated as well as 'broke.' Not having his fare when the conductor called for it, I granted his request for the accommodating nickel. Then I asked him what he had done with his $16.50. He answered frankly enough: 'Ten dollars went for a champagne supper with the boys—and I bought drinks with five.' I asked him what he had done with the other $1.50. After a moment's thought he hesitatingly answered: 'Well, I guess I just spent it foolishly.'"

Dying Race.

According to the annual report of the Aborigines' Protection board, which has been laid on the table of the legislative assembly, the number of aborigines in New South Wales at the last census, on September 1, 1910, was 1,373 full bloods (831 males, 538 females, and 503 children), and 5,085 half-castes (1,203 males, 1,046 females, and 2,836 children), making a total of 6,458, which represented a decrease compared with the previous year of 251 full bloods and 162 half-castes—Lundee Advertiser.

If the Republicans of the county are not wondering whether or not they have a candidate for legislature, it is quite likely that they will begin to wonder over the subject when the campaign begins to warm up. Then they will ask whether Robt. M. Eldon who received the Republican nomination at the primaries, has turned that party down and got astride the Bull Moose party of Bill Elin's.

The latter party held a recent meeting at York and Mr. Wright, a delegate to the Republican State convention gave his proxy to Robt. M. Eldon. It was altogether unnecessary for Mr. Eldon to go; and he went out of his way to secure a proxy so that he could attend and help to select a delegate to the National Bull Moose convention in Chicago, which is going to nominate Roosevelt and do its utmost to defeat Taft. Eldon will not be able to straddle both the Elephant party and the Bull Moose party, for office holders of former are not going to help a representative of the latter who is helping them out of their jobs. It might be possible that this tangle would result in the Republicans demanding a candidate for the legislature who is their very own.

SICKLES STILL HIMSELF.

Last issue of Life contains the following clever editorial:

"Current narratives of the battle of Gettysburg record that General Sickles, early in the fight, moved his command forward from the ridge where he had been stationed to the ridge next ahead. When General Meade discovered it, his judgment was that Sickles had made a mistake; that his new position was untenable, but that it was too late to retire to where he belonged. Almost immediately General Sickles was attacked and his command driven back in spite of his gallant exertions, in the course of which he lost a leg.

"The General has come out for Roosevelt and at a Roosevelt meeting declared that Governor Wilson was not fit to be President because 'He was born amid rebel surroundings. All his family and kindred fought on the wrong side—the Confederate side. We in the North have never been disposed to put such a man in the White

Beautiful Church Wedding.

COLE—HILDEBRAND—On last Thursday morning, Hon. James Clement Cole and Miss Mildred Content Hildebrand only daughter and child of Dr. J. H. Hildebrand, of Biglerville, were united in marriage with a nuptial mass in St. Ignatius church, Buchanan Valley, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Father Edgar Howard.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of Irish point lace, over messaline with train and a veil caught with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. The attendants were Miss Edith Cole, sister of the groom as bridesmaid, wearing a gown of pink silk marquisette with large picture hat and carrying pink roses. The best man was Leo Livers, of Groton, Virginia. The ushers were Charles Kimple of Gettysburg and Edgar Thorn of Martinsburg, W. Va.

The church was attractively decorated in a color scheme of pink and white and as the bridal party entered the church Miss Virginia Irvin played the Lohengrin march as the processional. The Mendelssohn march was played as the recessional.

After the ceremony a dinner was served at the home of the bride in Biglerville, where they received the congratulations of their many friends.

Hon. James C. Cole is well known all over the county, both as a business man, a member of the lumber firm of Tate & Cole and for his record as the Democratic representative in the Legislature of 1908 and 1910 from Adams county. He has many friends who have only the best of wishes for Mr. and Mrs. Cole, who are away on an ex. Falls, Thousand Isles and eastern cities.

Among the guests at the wedding were relatives and friends from Groton, Winchester, Martinsburg, Altoona, Emmitsburg, York, Hanover, East Berlin, York Springs and Gettysburg.

McSHERRY—BROWN—Announcements have been received of the marriage of Mr. Joseph B. McSherry, of Chicago, Ill., to Miss Violet Virginia Brown, also of Chicago. The wedding took place Wednesday afternoon, July 24th, at five o'clock in the St. Vincent De Paul Church, Chicago. Miss Winifred McSherry, of Littlestown, a sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and Mr. J. Brown, a brother of the bride, was best man. Mr. McSherry is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Sarah McSherry, of Littlestown, and resided in Littlestown until about two years ago, when he went to Chicago, where he has since resided, and where he is employed in one of the largest undertaking establishments in the city.

LARSON—DEHL—A quiet wedding service was held on Wednesday evening, July 24, at half past eight o'clock, in the historic old Church of Great Congoway, when Miss Sara Margaret Dehl of New Oxford became the bride of Mr. Eric F. Larson, formerly of Chicago. The bride was daintily attired in white and wore upon her arm an heirloom in the form of a quaint old bracelet which was worn by her grandmother at her own wedding. The groom was born in Sweden, but like many another young man, he decided to seek his fortune, and now his bride, in America. He is a cabinet maker by trade, and is a bright, wide-awake, energetic young American.

The bridal couple left New Oxford the next morning for their bridal trip. They expect to make their home in Philadelphia.

As to Gettysburg-Harrisburg Road.

The highways leading to Gettysburg from Carlisle and Harrisburg, the roads over which automobiles traveled to the encampment of the National Guard last week, are in the best shape they have been for years. Several gangs of men have been at work removing the "water breakers" which have lined the roads and travel will be greatly expedited. The work has been in charge of Engineers C. W. Hardt and E. S. Frey. Persons traveling to Gettysburg from Harrisburg after visiting the State Capitol will use the State road to Mechanicsburg and then go to Shepherdstown and then to York Springs. About fifty men have been employed on this road.

Painful Wound.

Prof. Nicholas Heitzel, principal of the Lewistown schools, who, with his family, is spending the summer vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Heitzel, near Storm's store, Mountpleasant township, met with a very painful accident a few days ago. He was handling a heavy board from which a nail was protruding, when the piece of lumber accidentally fell from his hand and the nail passed entirely through one of his great toes, making a very painful wound.

Telephone Improvements.

Recent estimates of work to be done by The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania in the near future involving the expenditure of about $17,000, have been made public by S. S. Eberts, District Manager, Harrisburg, Pa.

These estimates cover the building of toll lines between Harrisburg and Newville, and Harrisburg and York, and it is believed, will bring about a much higher grade of service between these points. The new work will bring the lines up to the very high Bell standard.

He wore a light brown hat, no vest, blue trousers with red stripe, light coat, black shirt, gray underwear, button shoes and tan hose. A Series of Accidents.

Joseph Holtz of New Oxford met with an accident while helping to put away the harvest on one of his farms near New Chester. He was on the hay mow and losing his balance fell to the floor breaking one of the bones in his left arm close to the wrist and sustaining other injuries.

Auctioneer Adam Kimmel, of near Bowlder, recently slipped and fell on a wet plank and so badly injured his right shoulder and arm that it required medical attention.

Harry March, residing on the farm of C. E. Winand, beyond New Chester, is carrying his left arm in a sling on account of a recent accident. Mr. March was on the top of a load of hay in the barn handling the trip rope of a hay fork when the rope suddenly broke and losing his balance, he fell from the wagon striking his left elbow with much force upon the floor. Since the accident the hand and forearm seem to be entirely paralyzed and he has no use of it whatever.

Mrs. Robert Phillips, of Reading township, while at work in her home fell and badly sprained her right leg, requiring the use of crutches.

George Fissel, Frederick Ruppert and George Glatfelter, all of East Berlin tramped upon nails where building operations were going on and are nursing painful injuries.

David, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel M. Diehl, of Mountpleasant township, was working about a horse a few days ago when the animal kicked out with both hind legs striking the lad on the breast with the hocks, and bruising him considerably and badly stunning him. Nearness to horse prevented lad from receiving full force of the kick.

Cool Your Skin

Hot weather brings skin troubles. Perspiration irritates. "Sleeping" eczema is brought to the surface. Rash, disfiguring pimples, ivy poison, bites, hives, prickly heat, are all common during the summer season. Often, too, serious skin troubles begin this way. The thing to do is to cool the skin.

and for this there is nothing so good as that cooling, soothing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for eczema.

A 25 cent trial bottle will give you instant relief. We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this D. D. D. Prescription to a skin sufferer here and there, and we want you to try it now on our positive no pay guarantee.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

DEDICATED LAST THURSDAY AT THE HOFFMAN ORPHANAGE.

The Building the Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Helb, of York
—Furnishings Donated.

The Helb Administration Building at George W. and Agnes Hoffman Orphanage was dedicated last Thursday afternoon, July 25 with appropriate services.

A large number of persons were in attendance. Visitors coming by trains were conveyed from Littlestown and Gettysburg in automobiles and carriages. Several hundred conveyances brought the country people living in the county and it is a safe estimate that fully one thousand people were present. A larger attendance was prevented by reason of the threatening weather previously and other events going on.

The Helb administration building is a handsome structure and accompanying picture will give some idea of the edifice. The building will be for administration purposes, and the Superintendent and family will occupy it. On the first floor are the reception rooms, dining room, and office. On the second floor the sleeping apartments. The third floor will be used as an infirmary until erection of a separate hospital building. The building is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Helb, of York, who were present at the dedication. The contract price for the building was $8,125 and there were a few extras and it is expected that the building complete will cost about $8,350.

A luncheon at a very reasonable price was provided for the visitors. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were also provided. A bazaar of fancy goods to which a number of people in Gettysburg contributed was also conducted. From the dinner it is believed about $60 net will be realized of the affairs of this Christian Home for orphan girls and boys. The address of the Hon. C. W. Myers, of the auditor general's department, Harrisburg, and Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of I. O. O. F. delighted the audience. He took for the theme of his address the spirit of the age in the present day conceptions of the Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of Man. He told of the great charities of the State of Pennsylvania, amounting to as much as fifteen millions a year. Of the great charities of the I. O. O. F. Then he directed attention to gift of the Hoffman Orphanage and the great breadth of the institution. That its doors were open to orphan boys and girls without regard to denominational distinction. It is regarded as one of the broadest charities of the Reformed church. The address was illuminated with a number of good stories, helping to drive home the point of view.

Before the closing prayer by Rev. James Riley Berg, of Altoona, President of the Synod of the Potomac and the benediction by Dr. Barkley, the children at the Orphanage gave exercises of songs, recitations and drills.

The administration building is the second new building to be built along the cottage plan adopted by the Board. The Orphanage has already enlisted a broad sympathy and support, as evidenced by the attendance of 23 ministers and a number of gifts which have been made the institution.

The ministers present were: Dr. T. J. Barkley, of Gettysburg; Revs. Jos. F. Peters, Samuel H. Stein, E. Bruce Lyttle of York, John S. Adams, of Dallastown; A. M. Gluck, of Emmitsburg; J. W. Welsh and A. J. Brumbaugh of Spring Grove; Chas. H. Slinghoff, of Spring City; W. H. Miller, of East Berlin; E. M. Sandoe, of Heliam; E. O. Keen, of Waynesboro; M. W. Switzer, of Union Bridge; S. C. Hoover of Silver Run, C. S. Slagle, of Westminster, F. T. Motter, A. S. Bechant and J. H. Hartman, of Hanover, O. S. Hartman, of Baltimore, J. S. Hartman of the Orphanage and Martin Rudisul of Mt. Joy township.

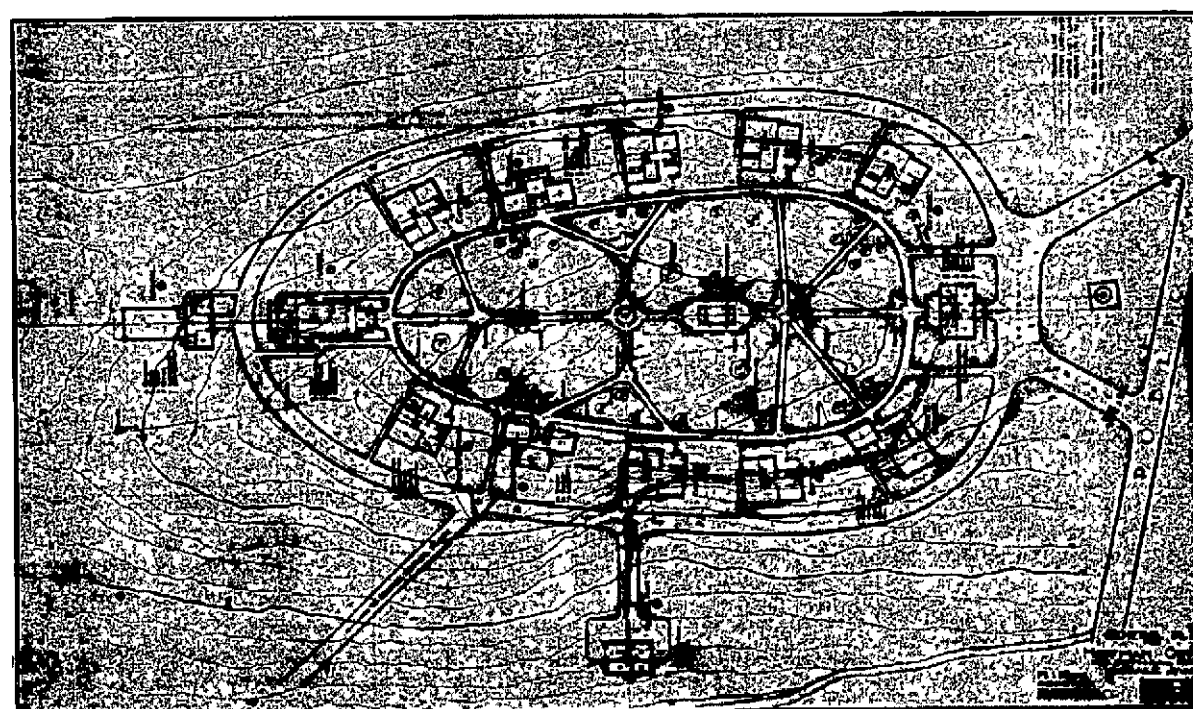

The infirmary in the new building has been furnished by F. J. Hantz man, of Harrisburg in memory of his son, Arthur Sylvester Hantzman. The guest chamber has been donated by the Mission Band of the Reformed church of Newport. The parlor has been furnished by C. A. Strack & Son, of York and the dining room by the Emmanuel Reformed congregation of Baust, Md.

The needs of the institution are an electric lighting system by storage battery, a complete laundry equipment, and larger annual offerings to justify the acceptance of additional buildings. The Orphanage is largely supported by the Xmas donations in the Reformed churches of the Potomac Synod. The larger income is already needed and other buildings will increase this need.

The cut above shows plan adopted for the cottage system for Orphanage. But two of the proposed buildings have been erected.

Meeting of Physicians.

The physicians of the Fifth Censorial District composed of counties of Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, Fulton and York, held an annual meeting on last Wednesday at Mt. Holly Springs, which was attended by more than a hundred persons.

Dr. H. C. Deaver, of Philadelphia, one of the most noted surgeons of this country gave an excellent address on "Value of Practical Vaccines," and Dr. James Tyson, a noted physician of the same city spoke on "The Family Physician."

A banquet was held at the Holly Inn during the afternoon and a number of toasts were responded to.

The officials elected for the new year are president, Dr. Harry A. Spangler, a native of Adams county, vice president, Dr. Wm. E. Wolf, of Arendtsville; sec. and Treas., Dr. Eisenhart, of York.

Refused Divorce Faces Bigamy

Judge Gillan, of Franklin county, refused a divorce in the case of Dr. Rolla Finkbinder, who applied for a divorce in Chambersburg several months ago upon the grounds of desertion. Mrs. Finkbinder resides in Harrisburg.

Early last month Finkbinder was arrested when he stepped from a train in Gettysburg, charged with bigamy. Mrs. Finkbinder, whom she had attempted to divorce had, brought the charge.

At the hearing June 12, it was brought out that February 20 last, Finkbinder had wed a Gettysburg girl, Miss Jennie Thomas. Some time after the second marriage Mrs. Finkbinder No. 1 learned of it and made an investigation. She found the facts true and at once took steps for his arrest.

Finkbinder is under bail to answer bigamy charge at the August Court.

Peculiar in Veterinary Annals.

A peculiar case came under the notice of a surgeon at Moing, N.S.W., recently. A valuable horse had been staked near the shoulder with a hook, and immediately began to swell all over in an amazing manner. The doctor found that from its nose to its hoofs the horse had swollen to almost twice its normal size. Apparently wind had got in between the flesh and the skin and blown it out like a football. When the surgeons tapped the animal in several places the wind escaped with a hiss. The doctor says it is the first case of its kind that he has met with in connection with animals, though he had met with similar cases in human beings.

TOUCHED THEIR SOFT HEART

In the Circumstances, Expressed Hope of Irish Youths Seemed Somewhat Humorous.

Supreme Court Justice Cohalan of New York, who is proud of his Irish blood, also believes that for keen wit and humor no race in the world equals the Irish. The justice spent the greater part of last summer on the "cold sod" and when he came home he had acquired a great fund of funny anecdotes illustrative of the often unconscious humor of the natives he met.

He tells a story of two husky lads who were tenants of the same landowner and who were constantly embroiled either with the man himself or one of his agents. At last things came to such a pass that the two decided to waylay their landlord. They chose a favorable spot along the road over which they knew the landlord must travel that afternoon and crouched in the ditch waiting. To beguile the time each told the other a part of the punishment he had devised for the landlord.

Said one, "O'll tap him on the head wid me blackthorn and whin he falls O'll step on his face an—"

The other interrupted: "O! mane to cut off his ears, split his nose an' if he makes a fuss O'll slit his weaz-and."

They kept up the bloodthirsty conversation for some time and at last one noticed the day was almost done and that it was far past the time when the landlord might have been expected to pass. He interrupted his sanguinary threats to call the attention of his companion to the flight of time and the non-appearance of the man they expected, exclaiming:

"Och, the poor fellow, O! hope nothin's happened him!"

SET THE PACE IN RECEPTIONS

Splendid Affair Given by United States Ambassador Guild Dazzled St. Petersburg Society.

The German and Russian newspapers bristle with reports concerning an official reception by the American ambassador at St. Petersburg, Curtis Guild, in the splendid palace he occupies, which was formerly the residence of Count Orloff Denison. Not even Ambassador Leishman, "glittering at the kaiser's court," could have been more imposing. The ambassador had at his side a functionary from the imperial court, who presented the guests. The ambassador's wife was beautifully gowned.

The guests were announced by a servant from the imperial ministry, who wore a black suit of eighteenth century style, with a lace jabot.

Mrs. Guild was greatly fatigued, for she had to stand three hours with outstretched hand in order that it might be kissed by all the men, according to the Russian fashion.

In the great dining hall on the floor above, hung with pictures of the Orloffs of the last three centuries, was a surprise for the guests. Instead of the usual tables with servants serving champagne, there were models in ice of a Russian farm house and an American cottage, lit with incandescent lights, from which flowed fountains of champagne. The American cottage bubbled with dry wine, while the Russian emitted a fruity variety.

Real Eugene Aram.

A sale of relics of Eugene Aram reminds us that Lord Lytton's Aram was a very different personage from him who was hanged at York, who, judging from the published account of the trial, was merely a felon of the baser sort. He associated with low companions, married a low wife and practiced swindling with a miserable creature whom in his younger days he was associated with in stealing flower-roots—for they were both gardeners—and finally murdered him to secure a few pounds, the proceeds of a swindle.

Aram possessed a vigorous intellect, had mastered the learned languages, had read every classic that came in his way, and, says a distinguished writer, when the learned felon came to make his defense all Britain was astonished by a piece of pleading which, if given to the public among the defenses and under the name of Thomas Lord Erskine, so celebrated for this species of composition, would certainly not be deemed unworthy of the collection of its author.

Work For Kings.

The sphere of foreign affairs is one in which a British monarch, for all his complete subordination to constitutional forms, still exercises real power. Unlike the late king, who was his own traveling ambassador, and whose personality made him welcome in the capitals of Europe, George V. chooses to work through his ministers. But there is every reason to believe that the monarch's views will carry weight with the cabinet. Situated as he is above party, the king may readily work for international friendship and peace without being accused of betraying the country's interests.

Biggest Thing in the World.

"Fighting Bob" Evans, said a naval veteran of Washington, "had, like most fighters, a tender heart."

"Fighting Bob" had a specially tender heart toward children. I once heard him say, as he held his little grandchild's hand:

"A child is the biggest thing in the world. A ragged, emaciated, hungry child is to me bigger than a battleship."

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"Then You'll Remember Me"

By Dorothy Douglas

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Alice Lange arose half impatiently from her desk and took up a position by the window. She gazed with unseeing eyes into the great court at the rear of the apartment building and nibbled the end of her pen thoughtfully.

"I want to marry him and I don't want to," she told herself with unsmiling eyes. "If only he could learn to love music I believe—I am positive I would marry him. Music is the greater half of my life and Jimmy is unutterably bored if any one save Harry Lauder is singing."

Alice heaved a sigh and turned again toward her desk. A spotless bit of monogram paper lay ready for her answer to Jimmy Blake. She dipped her pen in the ink and again nibbled the end of it. Suddenly her head turned and she listened.

A voice of wonderful baritone grandeur had burst into song.

The pen in Alice's hand dropped differently and she stole into her room by the open court in a desire to draw near the man's voice.

Fortunately her window was partly open and Alice sank down on her couch in an abandonment of exquisite enjoyment. In the recess of her mind was the thought that a new tenant had moved into the apartment and that she would have the pleasure, if stolen, of hearing him sing often.

Her critical ear told her that the voice, though of warm, rich timbre, was lacking in the minor technicalities and finish that would have put him on a level with the great Caruso.

"He is, no doubt, studying night and day," Alice decided, "and I will hear him practicing."

Then over her enjoyment of the music came the certain knowledge that windows were being opened in many of the apartments on the court.

It flashed upon her suddenly. The man was a street singer and those people were throwing him money.

Alice jumped up and thrust her head out of the window.

"Yes! There he is and I can see only the top of his head."

The man had been singing the more popular arias from the operas and when he had finished the Flower Song from "Faust" Alice watched him stoop to pick up the many little white packages that had been thrown to him.

In a panic lest she be too late she rushed to her desk and took the first bit of paper she found. Into the envelope she thrust a bill with a yellow back and threw it hastily out of the window.

The man would have been gone a second later, but he heard the girl's voice calling: "Here!" He turned back, picked up the envelope, and when he saw the denomination he looked quickly up at the window and for a moment Alice Lange looked into his sensitive, emotional face.

With his hat still in his hand then he sang the most beautiful of the "Bohemian Girl" arias, "Then You'll Remember Me."

There were tears in the girl's eyes and an ache in her throat when his voice so poignantly sweet sobbed its last appealing line, "Then you'll remember me."

After he had gone Alice did not return to her desk. Instead, she lay for a long time dreaming of the street singer's voice.

"No," she decided finally, "I cannot marry Jimmy Blake. I want to roam the Elysian fields and pluck the flowers of the greatest fragrance, and Jimmy—" Alice smiled wistfully. "Jimmy would only tell me I am moonstruck and take me to a vaudeville performance."

And when Jimmy received the note that Alice sent him he went out to the race track and came back through Elysian fields that swayed fantastically and had a tendency to rise up and make his great gray racer turn turtle as he careened madly over the roads.

Two, three years slipped by. Alice Lange's thoughts were not untinged with regret that she had dismissed Jimmy Blake from her trail of followers. Perhaps, after all, Elysian fields were only possible to roam in when there was one other to share them.

She had spent many vain hours in an effort to locate the man whose voice had seemed to change the entire course of her life, but he had disappeared apparently and no search could find him. Alice even went so far as to follow the example of a London society, and had organized a great concert, at which all the street musicians had an opportunity to perform before a critical and philanthropic audience.

But she came home from the venture tired and disheartened. There had been no voice with even a tenth portion of the sweetness of the one she sought.

For a time she sat back and wished she had married Jimmy Blake.

Then one morning in her mail she received a ticket for the opera. There was no message with the orchestra seat well toward the stage.

Alice pondered over the mysterious gift, but not deeply, for she had often been the recipient of seats from some of the singers. But later in the afternoon when a box of violets arrived in the same anonymous way she felt strangely curious. A well-known baritone had expressed his love for her, yet he was not in the habit of sending gifts without his card.

However, Alice dressed with unusual haste and pinned on the bouquets of exquisite English violets and ordered her limousine for the evening opera.

She took her seat with a strange and unusual excitement stirring within her. She scanned the programme and found only one familiar name.

"Gordon Trevor," mused Alice, "and I have longed for a new voice."

He had not sung his first aria and with eyes looking down into hers before she knew him. And with her recognition came the certain knowledge that he had sent both the ticket and the flowers.

Aside from the wonder of his voice, to which all the great audience was responding, and aside from her love of any great music, Alice found herself growing warm and feeling joyous thrills that never before had been hers. She knew also that the color had crept stealthily into her cheeks and that the man on the stage must be seeing it.

Not until the end of the second act, when he knew that he had succeeded even beyond his own hopes, did Gordon Trevor send a note to the girl who had accepted his flowers.

"If it does not seem like presumption," he had written, "I would like to take you to supper tonight."

And when the curtain had gone down with a storm of applause and New York had welcomed a great baritone, Alice Lange waited with quickly beating heart for the man who had sung in the streets.

The scent of flowers from the Elysian fields was in her nostrils and Alice drew a great breath when she stood face to face with Gordon Trevor.

His face was as sensitive as, when she had looked down from her apartment window, but now there was a certain sense of happiness radiating from it. He was very much the conqueror when he took Alice's hand within his own and the girl was peculiarly glad that the charm his voice had for her was duplicated in the man himself.

"I, of course, remember you," she said, quickly and a trifle nervously. "You deserve all the praise."

Gordon Trevor stopped her with a deprecatory gesture.

"It was you who finally made my study on the continent possible—your generosity sent me ahead just when I needed it most." Trevor was piloting her into his own automobile, and when she was comfortably wrapped in furs he sank down beside her.

"I am curious," Alice asked a little breathlessly because his mastery was beginning to make itself felt, "how you happened to remember me?"

"That was not difficult," he said in a low voice. "Your face, as it appeared framed in the window above me, has always remained in my vision. As for your name—it happened to be on the envelope which you thrust—"

Alice stopped him quickly. "I remember—it was the envelope from a letter I was preparing to answer." Suddenly she looked into his eyes and leaned, confidently nearer him. "Do you know, Mr. Trevor—that you saved me from marrying the wrong man—by your voice?"

"Then you'll remember me," Trevor said softly. "Will you not?"

SMARTER THAN THE LAWYER

Client Not Only Got Free Advice, but Also Check from Limb of the Law.

Amongst the many stories told concerning Coventry Patmore, the poet, the following, perhaps, is one of the most amusing:

When Patmore lived in his beautiful old house at Hastings, a kind of Harold Skimpole contrived to make his acquaintance.

"That fellow was one of the cleverest I ever came across," said Patmore, when speaking about him to a personal friend who relates the story.

"One day in the early part of our acquaintance he came to me for my advice. His wife had purchased a costume at one of the principal local drapers, but when an assistant was sent for to make certain alterations, the latter packed it up and carried it back to the shop. What should he do?"

"Go to Z—," I said, naming my lawyer; and off he started.

"Summon the people," said Z—; "that is what you had better do. But wait, have you paid for the dress? If not, send a check and summon them afterward."

"On my word, I never thought of that," exclaimed the other, innocently; "and as I don't happen to have my purse, just oblige me with your check for the amount!"

"And I'll be hanged," added Coventry Patmore, chuckling. "If he didn't bamboozle the lawyer. Instead of stepping over the way he went straight home. The dress was never paid for, and Z— never got back his money."

—London Mail.

Practical Hygiene.

During a recent epidemic of spinal meningitis in Dallas, Secretary Paul Casey, of the health department, went with a sanitary inspector to raise the quarantine on a negro shack and remove the big green sign.

An old negro woman came to the door.

"Now, sholy, boss, you ain't gwine ter take that sign down?" she asked.

"Yes, we are going to remove the quarantine," said Casey. "Don't you want it removed?"

"No, sah, boss, 'cause far ain't been nary collectah 'round heab sense dat sign was put up."

The quarantine remained.—Houston Post.

LESSON FOR DEACON JENKINS

Disaster Followed His Unwise Attempt to Bar Women From Their Meeting Place.

Deacon Jenkins happened to the accident of comin' mighty nigh freezin' to death recently, and here's how: He'd done swore a solemn oath, 'bout a yard long, that the suffragettin' women shouldn't hold a meetin' in his house, an' he 'peared to be in his right mind whilst he was a-swearin'; an' he fastened the winders, and double-barred the door, an' sot down to wait developments.

He didn't have to wait long. Here come the suffragettin' brigade, led by his good lady, two dozen strong, and findin' the house locked agin' 'em they smashed the windows and proceeded to bust the door in, in which they was quite successful; but there was no sign o' the deacon when they entered, though one o' them said she seen the remains of two legs goin' up the chimney.

The meetin' was called to order, an' didn't adjourn till 12 o'clock that night, when the deacon hollered down the chimney to his good lady to git a ladder, so that he could come down from the roof an' thaw himself.

He didn't have on no coat when he crawled up, but when he come down he had on a purty thick overcoat of icicles; but at this writin' he's thawin' most satisfactory.—Adams (Ga.) Enterprise.

CALLERS HAD PRIOR CLAIM

Comedian's Message Had Merit of Truth as Well as Also Being Highly Opportune.

H. C. Barnabee of the old Bostonians was engaged in a poker game at a Chicago hotel. There was a big pot on the table, Barnabee and one other player being the only two not scared out. The two-eyed each other wickedly. Barnabee's vis-a-vis took two cards on the draw, and comedian but one. The opposite man found he had not bettered the three jacks he was holding, but he felt sure they would beat the two pair he felt Barnabee had. To bring matters to a crisis he pushed forward all the chips he had, and waited inquiringly.

"Is that all you have?" asked the sad faced comedian before he looked at his hand.

"Every cent in sight."

Just then the agent of the Bostonians put his head in the door, and said: "Mr. Barnabee, there is a gentleman in the parlor who wants to see you."

"Wait just a minute," said Barnabee. He carefully flayed his cards and found that he had filled his hand. Then he turned to the man in the doorway and said calmly: "Kindly tell the gentleman that I have callers."

The Common Sense of It.

The really old-fashioned educational system upon which ours is founded had a vigorous common sense about it. School ended for the boy at 14 or 15, the freedom of college began at once, and the boy must stand on his own feet. An intellectual standard of a comparatively uniform type was demanded of college graduates. Roughly speaking there was, outside of mathematics and the limited number of sciences then studied, only one system of thought of any importance to be learned, and this involved a real knowledge of Latin and English literature. To be without this was to be in a sense, unfit. The college provided the simple and direct means of mastering this system; and young men set themselves to the task of acquiring it. The pressure of real life, therefore, was felt throughout the system, and the spirit of earnestness permeated education. In other words, the use of one's studies was not lost sight of as now.—Atlantic Monthly.

Lived Wisely and Well.

Felix Schweighofer, the German comedian who died recently, left an estate valued at 1,000,000 marks, and commenting on the extraordinary fact, one of his biographers says: "He was a model citizen as well as a great actor. As a citizen he was content to be one of the great majority and had no ambition to be one of the 'grand' class. He was thrifty, but his purse was never closed against the needy and what he did for them was done in secrecy. He was not like many gifted and consequently popular actors who have their regular court, their flatterers, press agents and even scientific helpers. They live in splendor and in the glory which they purchase. They enjoy their lives not so thoroughly as did Schweighofer; but what remains when their curtain has descended is not often a million."

Noisy Rest.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, who has done so much to diminish New York's noises, said in a recent anti-noise address: "I congratulate those New York hotels that have substituted lights for bells. A light, you know, flashes up beneath a room number. In summoning servants that is quite as efficacious while it is ever so much less noisy than the ting-a-ling-a-ling of an electric bell."

"Hotels need such devices. You have heard, perhaps, of that typically noisy hotel whereof a man once asked: "Is it an up-to-date place?" "Up-to-date? Rather!" was a friend's reply. "They bring you every night a sleeping powder with your ice water."
